In addition, KORINDO big family should be proud of the Indonesian government's appreciation given to one of KORINDO's business unit in oil palm plantation field.

KORINDO Cares for Biodiversity Conservation

DKI Jakarta is having an increasingly rapid pace of development. This led to the abandonment of people's need for a green, rich in water and fresh air environment as a source of life. To overcome this problem, tree planting is a the best solution that can be done by all elements of community in the capital city.

The Head of Forestry Service DKI Jakarta, Djafar Muchlisin said to achieve an environmentally friendly and healthy city, there needs to be at least 30% of land cover area from the total area of the city. In Jakarta, the land cover area only reaches 11%.

"To fill the lack of land cover, there needs to be a massive amount of tree planting," said Djafar during the tree planting activity, Korindo Cares for Biodiversity Conservation in Cempaka Urban Forest, Cilangkap, East Jakarta, Saturday (20/5).

Djafar said, the lack of land cover in Jakarta has been causing problems ranging from flood, drought, to the lack of proper green areas. Tree planting is considered as one of the best solutions to the condition.

Korindo CEO, Mr. Robert Seung expressed that environmental preservation must be maintained and made aware to everyone. Carrying a theme of Korindo Cares for Biodiversity Conservation, Robert stated that this year, Korindo distributed 5000 tree seedlings, which were planted in four parks in DKI Jakarta, namely Taman Hutan Cempaka, Pondok Ranggon, Bambu Petung, and Lapangan Tembak, East Jakarta.

In the four parks, the tree planting action was attended by 922 students from SMPN 196, SMPN 230, MTsN 22, SMPN 147, SMPN 283, SMPN 9 East Jakarta, and the whole board of directors along with 100 employees from Korindo Group. In addition to the planting of 5000 tree seedlings, there were also the release of 100 birds, and 1000 fish seeds.

The event involved at least 1200 people to do the planting. In addition to the Head of Forestry Service DKI Jakarta, the event was also attended by the Director General of the Ministry of Environment and Forestry of the Republic of Indonesia, Hilman Nugraha, the Assistant of Economic and Development Affairs of East Jakarta, Sofian, and the local community leaders.

"This nature is a precious heritage to be passed on to the future generations. And I am certain that this greening activity is one of the important steps to preserve our nature," said Mr. Robert Seung.

In its previous years, Korindo has been routinely conducting several environmental care activities in a number of locations, such as the Ciliwung Cleaning Action in Bogor dan Tree Planting Actions which consists of 226,000 trees in Bogor, Wonogiri, Central Kalimantan, Timor Island, and Papua.

Seeing the positive response expressed by the government and the community, Mr. Robert said similar events will continue to be held in various locations in DKI Jakarta. Therefore, it is hoped that all empty lands owned by the local government of DKI Jakarta, especially the parks and urban forest, can be green and filled with plants. (gie)

“We hoped through this action, the park’s role as Jakarta’s city lungs would improve. Hopefully people can receive positive impact from the nature preservation and see the urban forest park as an eco-tourism destination for families,”

Korindo Plants 500 Tree Seedlings in Jakarta Forest

In celebrating the Earth Day, Seru Bareng Community Jakarta in collaboration with the Provincial Government of DKI Jakarta, in particular the Forestry Service, held a social event themed “Hutan Jakarta.” The event was held in Srengseng Urban Forest, West Jakarta, April 2017.

Korindo Group has contributed in the event by providing 500 tree seedlings that were planted in Srengseng Urban Forest. “Through this contribution, Korindo hopes that Srengseng Urban Forest will be more sustainable and attracts more visitors, both from Jakarta and other areas,” said Andre Roberto, GM of HRD and GA Division of Korindo Group at the venue.

As Andre explained, the purpose of this contribution was to support the replanting in the capital of Jakarta and to improve the function of urban forest as the lung of the city. “It is part of a series of the environmental conservation activities around Jakarta, which is one of the pillars of Korindo CSR, for a greener, more beautiful, and more sustainable capital,” he said. He also stated that Korindo will plant 5,000 trees in Cempaka Urban Forest, Cilangkap, East Jakarta in May 2017.

On the same occasion, the Head of Seru Bareng Jakarta Community, Julian Riezki, explained that the theme of Hutan Jakarta or Hari Untuk Anak Jakarta was “Bukan untuk Hura-hura (Not Just for Fun).” The concept was just as a simple Jamboree with camping and collaboration between nature and art. The event in Jakarta Forest was filled with collaborations from various creative community such as Kelas Pagi Photography Community, Stand Up Community, Movie Community, Poetry Community, and Harmonica Community. “The target of this event is to let the young generation know that Jakarta has many urban forests which are very useful and have many purposes for the community and the youth. They can be used as places for positive activities, sharing, education, and recreation as an alternative destination for families in holiday, especially for Jakarta citizens,” said Julian. (ray)

Korindo's Oil Palm Plantation Division in Papua has managed to gain appreciation from the Indonesian government through the Ministry of Agriculture of The Republic of Indonesia. This appreciation was given by the Director General of Plantation from Indonesia's Ministry of Agriculture in the International Conference on Indonesian Sustainable Palm Oil (ICISPO) 2017 on April 11th 2017.

The appreciation was given to Korindo Group due to its proper practices in oil palm plantation governance. The said

Korindo Became the First Company in Papua to Obtain ISPO

Indonesian Sustainable Palm Oil (ISPO) certificate received by Korindo's Oil Palm Plantation Division on December 2016 has made Korindo as the first company in Papua to obtain ISPO. Several other oil palm plantation divisions located in Papua was also predicted to receive ISPO in the end of 2017. This is stated by the Vice Chairman of Korindo Group, Mr. Kim Hoon to the media in the International Conference in Indonesia Sustainable Palm Oil (IC-ISPO) 2017 on April 11th 2017.

"We are committed in following ISPO. In this case, the company is running a business that complies with and obeys the regulation. Korindo is the first company in Papua to receive ISPO. Based on that fact, how could there be accusations stating that we didn't pay attention to the environmental aspects in plantation management," Mr. Kim Hoon said.

As he explained, the oil palm plantation managed by Korindo is located in an area for other uses (APL). And Korindo's presence in Papua is due to the government's call to participate in building the Eastern Indonesia region. "So it is clear that we did not cause deforestation as accused by other parties such as foreign NGOs," he said.

Study from 2 Ministries

Recently, several Korindo's oil palm divisions, which are located in Papua, became an object of a study conducted by the Ministry of Agriculture and the Ministry of Environment and Forestry, along with Leadership Park Institute. The study is regarding the company's commitment for the effort to prevent and handle forest fire in oil palm plantation area.

The study result shows that Korindo has fulfilled the criteria on land clearing method and in handling/controlling fire, and the company already has Standard Operating Procedure (SOP) in controlling fire, with trained and skilled human resources, in accordance with Permenhut 32 Year 2016 Article 43. Moreover, the company, in improving the human resources capacity for Dalkarhutla (forest and land fire control), is active in running various training, briefing, and giving technical guidance.

They also provide infrastructure and equipment for land fire control, a simulation as well as socialization on forest fire, held in cooperation with the government, police force, military force, medical team, Korindo Group's fire emergency team and the community. Often times, a joint training is often held by Korindo Group's fire emergency team. (ray)

Kim Wana Jaya
Vice President Korindo Group

We Have a Commitment to Build Papua

Building palm oil plantations in Papua is different from building one in Sumatra and Kalimantan. The challenges faced are harder, from infrastructure to social aspects. Therefore, the operational cost could be higher than the average cost.

"In 1993, no single person (company) would want to open a plantation in Papua. They had to build the infrastructure on their own. That is the reason why more companies had interest in Sumatra and Kalimantan," recalled Kim Wana Jaya, the Vice President of Korindo Group in his interview with Sawit Indonesia Magazine in his office, which is located in Pancoran, Jakarta Selatan.

Kim admitted that the operational cost of palm oil in Papua is higher due to the lack of support. As a result, the products to be sold experienced difficulty compared to the ones from Kalimantan and Sumatra. "It could be sold, but with a slight margin," he said.

The difficulties in infrastructure and transportation access have also caused the clearing of oil palm plantation takes longer time than usual. According to Kim, the land clearing of a 10 thousand hectares area required almost 10 years of period.

When this issue was delivered to other companies, many did not believe it. However, Kim explained that the conditions in Papua was completely different with the plantations in other regions such as Sumatra and Kalimantan. "No major companies dared to enter Papua. But we're different, we dared to invest in Papua," said Kim.

Despite the many challenges, Korindo continued its oil palm business until today. According to Kim, communication between the company and the community is going very well and is facing no interference. "How could we manage to survive until now if the company was being arrogant and snob toward the community," Kim Wana Jaya said in his interview at the beginning of March 2017, in Jakarta.

Green Tomorrow editorial once again presents an interview of Mr. Kim Wana Jaya with Sawit Indonesia Magazine which was published in May 15th 2017:

Could you explain when did the company start running its business in Papua?

We built the plywood factory in 1980-1981 since we adjusted ourselves with the government regulation at the time, that banned log exports. By then, the company owned area with Forest Concession Right (HPH), which has been operating in 1969. However, after the log exporting ban, the company started to adjust with the situation at that time.

The plywood factory, which was built by the company in four regions, namely in Balikpapan, Pangkalan Bun, Tanjung Pinang, and Papua. The existence of the four factories made us to become a company with the largest production capacity of plywood. The plywood market, particularly in the Middle East, became our main market. The company's plywood business in Kalimantan and Riau is not integrated with the other business units. Unlike Papua, which its operational cost is quite high due to the less supportive infrastructure, which makes it difficult to compete with products from Kalimantan and Sumatra. It can be sold, but with a slight margin.

Then, what was the solution to overcome the problem?

I proposed an integration with other commodities so it could run simultaneously. The suitable commodity was oil palm. In 1993, the company started to prepare a land clearing for oil palm plantation in Papua. At that time, there was no one would want to enter the area. Meanwhile, we already had a well-run organization in Plywood.

Companies that want to open a plantation had to build infrastructure on their own. Therefore, other companies had more interest in Sumatra and Kalimantan. But we were different, we needed other commodity to be planted there. So we dared to invest.

What challenges did the company face when starting oil palm plantation in Papua?

It was a big challenge. First, we were faced by the monetary crisis in 1998. At that time, many oil palm plantations were being sold in Kalimantan. We were thinking of buying them because of the cheap price. But we had a doubt to do a plantation acquisition. Second, following the crisis, there was hostage incident by the OPM (Free Papua Movement), involving 3 Korean citizenship. We almost stopped the plantation activity because the investment resources were gone. However, there was a gradual rise in the CPO price, thus, we carried on.

Where is the location of the company's plantation?

Korindo's Oil Palm Plantation Division conducts its operation in Merauke. At the beginning, we obtained release permit for 30 thousand hectares of land near Trans Irian road. To open the first 10 thousand hectares of land, we needed 10 years of period due to many obstacles, among others were road access and transportation. When I told this to others palm oil companies, they did not believe it, but I explained that we were located in Papua, which condition was different. There were so many challenges, so we built both infrastructure and the plantation for almost 15 years, and now it has been 25 years. The cost for opening an oil palm plantation in Papua was indeed higher, that's how it is.

What made the company persist? What were the benefits for the company to operate a plantation in Papua?

We gained profit due to the high productivity of oil palm, which reached 30% higher than the ones in Sumatera and Kalimantan. The rainfall in Papua reached 4,000-5,000 mm per year. The second, plantation industry suits the Papuans. If you have the work skills, you will receive a big income.

What was your response regarding the NGOs' attack against palm oil plantation companies some time ago?

For us, they are not NGOs, they are campaigners. They came all of a sudden, then the company stopped operating. We realize that the campaigners's purpose is to attack oil palm industry entrepreneurs in Indonesia.

The local government supports the companies's existence. Therefore, they are angered by the demand to stop the land clearing. What needs to be stressed, we did not cause deforestation because the location of the plantation is located near Trans Irian road. Moreover, our company complies with the regulation and have obtained the ISPO certification.

At the moment, the planted oil palm plantation is around 50 thousand hectares. If someone cut the trees and didn't plant the area, that is wrong. It is different with us, who really maintain sustainability. The 20% of plasma plantation which has been prepared is managed by the cooperative. The people of Papua have joined the cooperative, we created the program.

What is the positive impact from the existence of the company toward the people of Papua?

First, they received many facilities. This can be explained by Pak Luwy (According to Luwy, the company has absorbed direct labors as many as 10 thousand people. 31% of that figure are Papuans, the whole community near the plantation area surely work in our location. We have built educational facilities such as elementary schools, junior high schools, and high schools. Next, we are planning to built playgroup facilities. There are also worship places and we have provided scholarships to 2500 people from the local educational facilities to universities.

Now Asiki has become the modern city that came a long way from being a district village in Boven Digoel Regency. The facilities built, among others, are 500 km long road and 9 MW of power supply. And this year, a hospital will be run, based on the cooperation with WIKA (PT. Wijaya Karya). The company's contribution to the GDP of Merauke and Boven Digoel Regencies reached 30%-50%. This is a very large amount.

How far the company has taken the ISPO commitment?

We are committed in running the ISPO. In this case, the company runs its business in compliance and in accordance to the regulation. The location of the plantation is located in the APL (areas for other uses). Our mission is clear; Korindo is in Papua due to the government's invitation to contribute in the development. So it is clear, and there is no single one of us who caused the deforestation as accused by the NGO.

PT Tunas Sawa Erma is the first company to obtain ISPO in Papua. Therefore, how come there are accusations that we didn't pay attention to the environmental aspects in plantation governance. This year, there will be more of our business units that will obtain the ISPO, which are PT Berkas Citra Abadi and PT Dongin Prabhawa.

What did the company do to build a synergy with the local community?

The company has a long history in Papua, so there is no way for the company to show arrogance to the people. That is why, the company is able to operate for a long time in Papua, this is the key. At the beginning of every activity, we carried out a public consultation with the people, three times at the minimum. We always let them know about our activity plan and its impact to the community. We have done a lot for Papua, and the company will continue its contribution to Papua's development.

KORINDO and 330-Raider Force Unit Serve Free Medical Service

The Division of Palm Oil Plantation of Korindo in Papua has been faithfully involved in a health care project in its operational site by providing a free medical service for people who live in a remote area of Butiptiri. It is quite far from Boven Digoel and the capital city of Jair District. Despite of the long distance, it did not weaken the spirit of the Korindo CSR Team and the 330-Raider Force Unit to serve the health and counseling service on last February 19th 2017.

The team had to go by land and by river for two hours just to reach the Butiptiri village. Therefore, due to its long distance and inadequate access, the community health service has become a facility that is rare to find by the village people.

Managing Director Korindo at Papua, Mr. Yi Jong Myeong together with his ranks came also and took part in a Sunday Service at church together with the Butiptiri community before starting the health service in the village.

There were 125 out of 150 Butiptiri's total number of inhabitants came to get examination and other health services. This health program served by the Community Health Center/ Pusat Kesehatan Masyarakat (Puskesmas) opens only once a month. However, in case there are patients who need special treatments they will have to go to referral clinic of Korindo at Camp 19.

"Lacking of knowledge on how to live hygienically and healthily has caused many of the Butiptiri's people getting infected easily by diseases such as Malaria, Dengue Fever, and Vomiting & Defecating," explained Yosep Kemi, health assistant in Butiptiri village.

The community is very glad and grateful to know that there is this kind of health service program initiated by the Papua Korindo's CSR team and hopes that it will be regularly available. We also hope that the cooperation with the team will continue in a long term," said Herman Ateka.

Satuman, Coordinator of CSR Korindo in Papua stated that the Social Service through free medical and counseling service is a part of the CSR team's projects. This action proves that Korindo truly cares for the local people who live around the area of Korindo Papua Company, therefore eagerly putting their best efforts to increase the welfare of the locals and take part in developing a healthy nation successor generation. (man)

Korindo's Involvement in Helping the Papuans

There are many ways for a company to express its virtues to society and one of them is through providing health services. The Division of Palm Oil Plantation Korindo Papua (PAL) has been focusing on health issues, which have compelled them to organize a free medical and counseling service for the people who live across the border of Rawa Bastop, Merauke Region, on March 10th 2017.

This service was visited by 103 patients and would led them to join in a counseling session informing about healthy lifestyle at home and in the surrounding neighborhood and dental issues including its diseases prevention.

"We hope that people will be more aware of the importance of health and understand about the company's concern towards the community. While as for the volunteers, this kind of program has given them an opportunity to be actively engaged in social activities and have a direct interaction with the local community who live far from the company's area," said Hubertus, one of the volunteers of CSR Korindo social service.

The program is designated for remote places that are far and hard to access; one example is the Mutimanggi village. It is the farthest village from the district of Ulilin.

The company's serious step taken for the community was openly received and well appreciated. "Health service by Korindo is very helpful for the people who live around here. We have now realized that there is a company such Korindo who genuinely cares about us. I hope that this program will keep on going and will make improvements," said one of the village leaders in Rawa Basto. (man)

Traditional Market

To get to know the personality of a place, one must visit its marketplace. This is an expression we often hear in order to know how to adapt with people, culture, and a region in Indonesia.

The unique thing is, the market in Banjarmasin is held on a river, with a variety of things for sale. This is a usual thing to do for them and it is unusual for people in other places in Indonesia. There are a couple of marketplaces that are quite famous.

Pasar Kemakmuran - Kotabaru

Pasar Kemakmuran meaning "prosperity" market is located right in the center of Kotabaru city. It is the center of seafood trading in the area which are sold and distributed to Pulau Laut.

The process of catching the fish there is called Bagang derived from the name of fishing equipment in Banjarmasin. Bagang is actually a kind of wooden mixed with bamboo structure, like a small house set on the sea surface. It is equipped complete with a fish net and gas-lamp, and it is often used as a place for the fishermen to rest after having a long night of catching fish.

There is also a well-known local medium sized boat named Kelotokan. It is a traditional fish transporter that is used for catching larger amount of fish at the time of high-tide and go back to the shore during the recede time where it will be tied up for the fisherman to stay inside and have some rest.

Not far from the Kelotoks there is the largest area you can find in Kotabaru city for fish salting process. The fish salting house has been operating since 5 years ago and the results distributed mostly to Pulau Laut. Unlike other fish salting house, fish that go through the salting process here are applied only for Mackerels.

This market is well organized and facilitated. It has clean rest rooms and a mosque (musholla) made available for Muslim traders. Inside the market you can find 2 sections, one is for selling wet items such as meats and fish and the other one is for dry items or products like spices and vegetables. This helps buyers shop their daily necessities easier and more convenient. The sanitations also work well albeit the Market sells mostly fish that tends to spread rancid smell. Puddles created by the wet items are almost nowhere to be found in the market area.

We can also find some food stalls and restaurants offering grill services. Visitors can bring their own fish to the restaurant and asked to have them grilled. By paying only for Rp.10.000, we can have a set of meal including rice, fresh salad and a glass of warm unsweetened tea. It is very affordable, delicious, and enjoyable.

The Charm of Floating Market of Lok Baintan

Those who plan to go to South Kalimantan must visit the floating market of Lok Baintan which is the most authentic floating traditional market in the world that you can find. You can reach the market for 30 minutes by Kelotok.

et of Banjarmasin

This floating market is usually crowded both by shoppers and native people selling their own crops and cattle by the river. Although it is jammed pack every day, merchants are beginning to feel insecure. They are worried of losing customers since numbers of them prefer to shop in the city center.

The uniqueness of this market lies on its function as an assembly point for all the non-permanent sellers. At dawns sellers already start gathering under the hanging bridge of Lok Baintan and then continue to move, flowing all the way with the currents until daylight. The floating market starts very early but shoppers normally begin to fill the market from 6:00 am until 09:00 am (local time).

Visiting the floating market of Lok Baintan gives us a unique experience. We can rent the kelotok for Rp.400.000,-, with the capacity up to 20 people. That means each person can pay only for Rp. 20.000,-.

Sellers at this market still using bartering method until today but only for some certain circumstances, whereas buyers or shoppers, they still use cash as a conventional way of making transaction.

Pasar Tumpah Siring Banjarmasin

This Tumpah Siring market is the largest market in Banjarmasin city, attracting various kinds of visitor. The charm of the city is indeed lies on its concept of floating markets that is well-preserved by the tourism department of Banjarmasin. Most of the sellers on canoes come one day before the Siring market opens the next day. The long distance they have to take daily would not discourage them to sell their commodities.

Pasar Tumpah has always been crowded for the last 3 years. In the beginning, the market only filled with a few number of Banjarmasin's traditional culinary sellers. From that point on, the local government started to find ideas on how to attract more tourists and add more traditional values to that market, so that wider range of people will be more aware of the importance of the Banjarmasin market as the source of civilization establishment in Banjarmasin. In terms of price, most of the commodities offered in the market are relatively cheap since generally are harvested in the sellers' own field.

The Pasar Tumpah that is located in Taman Siring, near the mascot of proboscis monkey as the pride symbol of the Banjarmasin city, opens on Saturdays and Sundays. People would generally start hustling the market in the very early morning until mid-day.

Rivers, traditional markets, and civilization in South Kalimantan are the main interesting tourist attractions that you can experience. Unlike other major cities especially modern cities in Indonesia, Banjarmasin still keeps its own old culture and tradition. Its clean rivers, unique traditional restaurants, and beautiful nature are the Banjarmasin's attraction that makes the city becomes one of the most interesting tourist destinations in the island of Kalimantan. If you are desire to add your adventure experiences then don't be hesitated any longer. Just grab your luggage and go have fun. (CITILINK)
